Apologies for the delay.

Bio below, headshot attached.

Ellen Riotto is the Executive Director of the South Park Business Improvement District. Prior to this role, Ellen was the Director of Communication & Policy for the BID, where her creative and collaborative approach to problem-solving resulted in a staunch dedication to advancing the goals of the BID, raising its public profile, and ensuring consistent messaging and branding across all media, including the BID's website, various social networks, newsletters, and marketing collateral. Ellen uses this approach in her now role, serving as the connective tissue for all South Park stakeholders, and building diverse partnerships to ensure that public space in South Park is representative of and accessible to the entire community.

Ellen is a graduate of the Coro Fellowship program - a nine-month, full-time program in leadership and public affairs. Through her work with organizations like Sunnylands, LAPD, and the office of Los Angeles County Supervisor Hilda Solis, Ellen sharpened her ability to analyze systems, build relationships, and collaborate across sectors in order to problem-solve and succeed in building programming and strengthening partnerships.

Ellen holds a degree in Psychology from NYU.
